Finley Nature Study No. 15.

WHEN Winter comes the insects have disappeared, and our song-birds must depend on bird-seed, crumbs and nuts for food. When snow covers the ground, and the robin can find no worms, he is quite satisfied with an occasional apple. By leaving some of the apples hanging on an old apple-tree, you can attract a young army of robins in winter. Other birds which we are introduced to in this reel are the flycatcher, the black-necked stilt, the avocet and the magpie.
